

CONNECTS THE BRAIN.

The Organ That Enables the Hemispheres to Act in Harmony.

Near the base of every well organized human brain there is situated a curious little spongy body called the corpus callosum. This all important little organ consists of a double chain of white nerve fibers, and it is through these that the two portions (hemispheres) of the brain are enabled to act in harmony by being continually brought into anatomical and physiological relations with each other.

Several years ago a well known Philadelphia physician and surgeon, Dr. A. H. Stevens, made the announcement that, in his belief, the corpus callosum was the seat of the soul. His peculiar ideas were given quite an airing through the press at that time, but the whole theory fell pretty flat when Dr. A. F. Sawyer of San Francisco proved that a certain west coast worthy had survived twenty years after having the entire corpus callosum shot out of his thought tank and that another had lived eleven years after sustaining a similar injury. The psychologists were pretty well agreed that a man's life would terminate the moment his soul made its exit on the lead of a pistol cartridge. It was these well attested cases of men living after losing the corpus callosum that caused Dr. Stevens' "soul theory" to relapse into obscurity.

RED LETTER DAY OF PHILADELPHIA REVIVAL

The Torrey and Alexander Campaign Reaches White Hot Intensity.

Two Hundred and Fifty Converted at Two Meetings--A Thrill Felt Throughout the City--Flame of Revivalism Spreads to Churches--How the Telephone Helps to Spread the Good Work--Touching Letter and a Thrilling Scene.

By GEORGE T. B. DAVIS.

The great Philadelphia revival, led by Evangelists Torrey and Alexander, reached white hot intensity last Sunday, when at the afternoon and evening meetings about 250 men, women and children rose in all parts of the big auditorium to confess Christ. It was the red letter day of the revival thus far and sent a thrill throughout the city.

The revival flame is burning not only in the big mass meetings held at the armory, where 5,500 people gather each night, with many hundreds turned away, but the fire is spreading to the churches of Philadelphia. The pastors of the city are working hand in hand with the evangelists. The members of one congregation have set themselves to pray and work especially for newspaper reporters, actors, policemen and cabmen.

Bishop C. C. McCabe, who is now in the city, is delighted with the progress of the revival campaign. He recalls the days of the revival of 1857, when 300,000 converts were made in America, but says: "We must have a greater revival now. The need is greater; the opportunity is greater. Let Torrey and Alexander have our united support. The Methodists are holding meetings all over the city. They cannot all get into the auditorium. There are 84,000 Methodist people in Philadelphia. They are holding overflow meetings, but they are in hearty sympathy with Torrey and Alexander. Philadelphia has ever been a center of mighty religious influence. It will not fail now."

Revival Fervor at White Hot Intensity.

At the afternoon revival meetings Mr. Alexander, the sweet voiced singer, frequently conducts a testimony meeting during the preliminary song service.

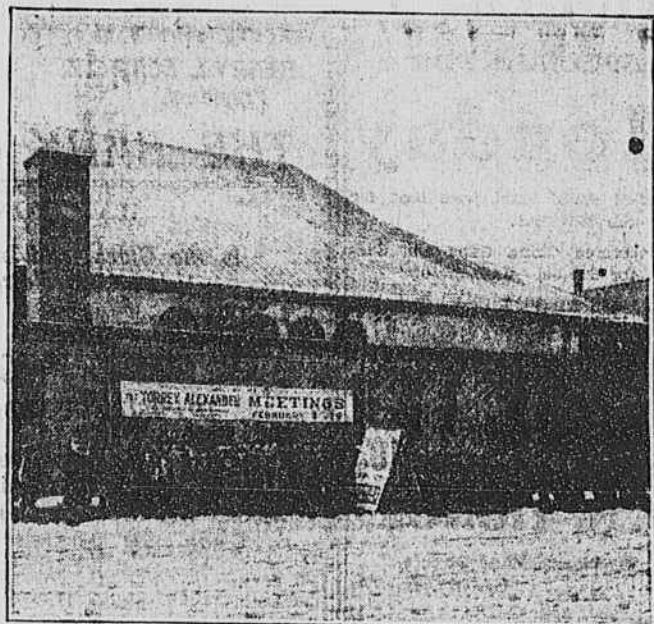

"I have had the joy of bringing six people to Christ in the meetings," said a middle aged woman, her face radiant with happiness, "and it is the greatest joy I have had in my life."

A Touching Letter.

A number of requests for prayer were then read by Dr. Torrey. One was from a woman whose heart was breaking over her fourteen-year-old boy, who had been led away by bad companions and was sinking lower in sin each day. The evangelist next read a touching letter from a lady who had wandered away from Christ in her love for art and music, but wanted to come back to God and be a soul winner. The letter said:

"I heard you today for the first time, and oh, how condemned I felt when you spoke of our home life and what a power for good it may be if only our life is consistent. Oh, pray for me, that I may become more humble, for my greatest obstacle is pride. Only this afternoon a person whom I had asked to come to the meetings asked me to pray for her. I said I would, but she does not know how much I need to be prayed for myself. A few years ago God did use me as an instrument for bringing souls into his kingdom, but the love of art and music has caused me to become careless and indifferent to him, but I do want to come back, pray that God may use me these months to be instant in season and out of season."

Another afternoon during a testimony meeting fifty men and women arose in quick succession, telling of conversions and of how the fire is spreading. A man in workman's garb in the rear of the house said, "We go out after blacksmiths and laborers.

CROWDS WAITING FOR THE DOORS TO OPEN.

ice. It is in these testimony meetings that the revival fervor often reaches a white hot intensity. During one such meeting an elderly, white haired man stood up and said: "On Sunday morning I spent two and a half hours walking up and down Broad street inviting people to the mission. I have had wonderful delight in bringing souls to Christ night after night."

A pastor testified: "We have had four converts at each of our Sunday evening services these last two weeks. Four others of our church were converted here, and twelve others were converted to personal work. Some of our members have been stirred up to do personal work everywhere. One man whom I never thought would do it has been speaking to people on the street cars. He heard a conductor swear and thought that was a good opportunity to invite him to the mission. A lady in my congregation has been doing personal work with her milkman."

"Amen!" exclaimed Dr. Torrey and Mr. Alexander in a joyous chorus.

A man on the platform, evidently a visitor, said, "In Chambersburg they have had a revival all winter and had 200 converts."

"I am from the city of Pottstown," declared a stout man with a black mustache, "and during the last two weeks I have had a greater burden for souls than ever before."

A gray haired man on the platform rose to say that he had just come from Orangeburg, S. C., where in a colored school there have been 140 converts.

The next speaker was a woman, who stood up and said she was so glad she had given her heart to the Lord the previous Sunday afternoon. She had scarcely taken her seat when the lady next her arose and said that she, too, had given herself to God at that same meeting. A moment later half a dozen women were on their feet with a similar declaration.

We have converted several and induced many to come to the meetings."

"Splendid!" commented Mr. Alexander.

"I have come from the coal region to get some fire," said a man "and I shall carry it back too."

"I thank God for the help I have received to bring my friends to Christ," said a little woman.

Wealthy Woman Much Interested.

Visitors are coming from long distances to catch the fire and carry it back to their communities. An evangelist and his wife came 1,500 miles in order to see the work and take part in it. A wealthy woman from Pennsylvania who gave $500 to the revival campaign has become so interested in the movement that she has come to Philadelphia and taken apartments for several weeks. Every night one of the most energetic workers in the meeting is a fine looking, portly business man from London, who caught the revival spirit when Torrey and Alexander were in the world's metropolis and has followed them over to the United States.

One evening recently Mr. Alexander noticed among the visitors Dr. Cleland B. McAfee, the well known Brooklyn pastor who succeeded Dr. Theodore L. Cuyler. When called upon by the gospel singer to speak, Dr. McAfee said that he brought greetings from Ira D. Sankey to Mr. Alexander and that no one was more keenly interested in the work of the evangelists or prayed more earnestly for their success than Dr. Cuyler. Dr. McAfee said that only a few days since Dr. Cuyler had expressed the wish that he would go to Philadelphia, see the work there and bring him back a report of it, that he might add to his prayers his thanksgiving for the results achieved.

Telephones to Spread Gospel Messages.

A modern invention has been introduced at the armory, which is probably unique in the history of revival meetings in America. Just above the speakers' platform a telephone company has installed a large megaphone, through which the singing of the choir and audience, the tones of Mr. Alexander as he conducts and the sermons of Dr. Torrey are conveyed by telephone throughout the city of Philadelphia. It is not now necessary for people to leave their homes in order to listen to the revival services—they can do so by simply taking the telephone receiver from the hook and asking central to connect them with the revival auditorium. They can then listen as long as they choose to the singing of Mr. Alexander or the preaching of Dr. Torrey. It is probable that before the revival ends some may be converted through the gospel message carried over the telephone wires to the enlarged audience.

The megaphone is proving a great blessing to invalids and others who cannot get to the revival meetings. A man who is employed as night watchman in a big department store, after listening to the singing, said: "I want to congratulate the man who sang bass so sweetly. While I had the phone in my hand my arm fairly trembled, and I faltered out in my lonely position. Praise God for the power that is springing up in that meeting!"

Cheers From the Audience.

At night a thrilling scene was witnessed, when at the close of a powerful sermon by Dr. Torrey on "Heroes and Cowards" over 100 men and boys arose in all parts of the armory, marched down to the front and confessed Christ. As the men streamed down to the front seats the enthusiasm was so great that the audience burst into cheers, which were at once checked by the evangelist in view of the solemnity of the occasion. When they all reached the front of the platform Dr. Torrey requested them to face the audience and repeat in chorus: "I have taken Jesus as my Saviour, my Lord and my King."

Hundreds of the men in the audience were in tears at the conclusion of Dr. Torrey's touching sermon. A large number of students from the various colleges of Philadelphia were in the audience and listened with deep attention as Dr. Torrey illustrated his address with several incidents from college life. In closing Dr. Torrey said:

A Son's Devotion to His Mother.

"A widow in the state of Georgia had a bright son. She made up her mind that he should have a college education. She had to work hard in order that he might have it—sometimes she even took in washing—and lived in the plainest sort of way. But she got her son through college. He was graduated at the top of his class and was made valedictorian. Furthermore, he took a gold medal for special excellence in study. Commencement day came, and he went to his mother and said, 'Mother, it is commencement day.' 'Why,' she said, 'my boy, of course I know that.' 'Well,' he said, 'I graduate today.' She said, 'Of course I know that, my son.' 'Well,' he said, 'why aren't you getting ready for the commencement exercises?' 'Why,' she said, 'my son, I am not going.' He said, 'You certainly are.' She said, 'I have nothing proper to wear. The finest people in town will be there, and you will be ashamed of your old mother in her plain, faded dress among those fine people.' The boy looked at her with eyes full of love. He said, 'What mother! Ashamed of you? Never. I owe all I am in the world to you, and what is more, I won't go unless you do.' He insisted, and she yielded."

"It was a plain and faded dress that she put on, but it was neat. Then he helped her pin the faded old shawl around her shoulders; then, taking her on his arm, he started down the main street, the town, into the church, down the middle aisle and gave her one of the best seats in the house among the friends of the graduating class. He went up on the platform, delivered his valedictory address, received his diploma and was handed his gold medal for special excellence in study. No sooner had he received the medal than he walked straight down from the platform to where the old lady was sitting in her faded shawl, pinned it on the shawl and said, 'Mother, that belongs to you; you earned it.' 'I only heard about a month ago after having told that story around the earth that that young man is today

Will Ship Body Away.

The body of Lee Wing, the Chinaman who died several days ago, will be sent to New York city today or tomorrow for interment. It was decided at first that the body should be buried in Greenlawn, but the Chinamen in charge of the corpse later concluded to ship it to the metropolis, where it will be taken in charge by one of the Chinese societies.

Public Building Inspected.

Mr. George William Deltrich, an attaché of the supervising architect's office of the Federal government, spent yesterday in the city and inspected the public building. Mr. Deltrich seemed to be well pleased with the building and said that he did not know of another city of this size that had such a structure.

At the Point of Death.

Mr. F. Guy Bryan, who has been seriously ill from tuberculosis for months, is at the point of death at the home of his parents, 1018 Twenty-seventh street. The young man has been weakening gradually during the past few weeks and the end is expected at any time.

Elevator Lot Park.

Editor Daily Press: The Merchants' Association of this city is about to spend considerable money beautifying some sixteen city lots along Washington avenue, between Twenty-eighth and Twenty-ninth streets. This property, I believe, belongs to the Chesapeake and Ohio Railway Company, and is presumed to be in litigation. It is the only vacant piece of land that size in the heart of the city and should be preserved for a breathing spot by the city and made as attractive as possible so as to favorably impress transients as well as delight the residents. The city could acquire this site by condemnation proceedings, even if it is in litigation, and pay the appraised valuation into the hands of the court or stand ready to do so when ownership is established by the court.

At some future time the city will need a site for a city hall and part of this park would make an ideal location for same and could be held in reserve for that purpose. I trust the city authorities will take this matter up through the proper channels and do what may be necessary to acquire this place for the city and future generation will bless them for their foresight.
